You can always find an old shirt to test the press. Then define the pressure. Rotate the buttons of pression to come to the desired configuration. The thickest materials usually require more pressure, while the thinner ones do not need it. You should seek a mother-to -day pressability in all cases. It is better to try it a little, however, that you find the one you think you offer the best results. In some presses, a lower pressure configuration makes it more difficult to wage the high. 6. Put your clothes on the press, it is essential that the material is straightened when placed inside the press. Any fold will lead to a bad impression. You can use the press to prize the clothes for 5 to 10 seconds to remove creases. It is also a good idea to stretch your shirt when you put it in the press. This way, the impression will be a little contract when you finish, making it less likely to break later. Take care that the side of the clothes you want to be printed is turned up. The t-shirt tag should be aligned in the part of the press. This will help put the impression correctly. There are printers that also project a laser grid on your clothing, making it a lot of facilitating the alignment of your design. Its printed transfer should be placed from brujules in the clothes, while the embroidered designs should be placed with the adhesive side down. You can put a towel or a thin cotton fabric on top of your transfer as a protection, although you don't have to do this if your press has a protective silicone pillow. 7. Transfer the design after correctly putting the clothes and impression on the press, you can overthrow the high. He must stop for you not need to physically press the top. Set the timer based on the instructions for its transfer role, usually between 10 seconds and 1 minute. May the time pass, open the press and take off your shirt. Leave the transfer role while still hot. Hopefully, hopefully, now see your design successfully transferred to your clothing, you can repeat the process now for new shirts if you are doing more of them. If you want to add a print to the other side of the shirt you have already printed, make sure to put a card inside it first. use less pressure this time to avoid reheating the first project. 8. Be careful with your impression you should leave your shirt to rest for at least 24 hours before washing it. that helps the impression to enter. when you wash it, turn it out so there is no friction. do not use detergents that are very strong as they can affect printing. Avoid drying dryers in favor of air drying. heat pressing hat now that you know how to heat pressing a shirt, you will see that the same principles largely apply to hat. you can treat them by praying a flat press u a special hat press, which makes it much easier. you can also oar transfer paper here, but it is easier to add designs to caps with heat transfer vinyl. this material is available in many colors and patterns, so you can find the ones you like most and cut the shapes you want. Once you have a design you like, use heat tape to attach it to the lid. If you are praying a flat press, you need to hold the interior lid with an oven mite and press it against the heated dish. since the front of the lid is bent, it is better to press the middle first and then the sides. you will have to make sure that the entire design surface has been heat treated so that you do not finish with just part of the project. hat presses come with several interchangeable curved plates, they can cover the entire surface of your project at the same time, so there is no need for manual maneuvering, this works for both hard caps andwith or without seams. Press the lid around the appropriate dish, pull the press down and wait for the required amount of time.
